Augusta County: John H. Cochran to His Mother, December 11, 1860

Summary:

Cochran talks about the growing anxiety and uncertainty surrounding South Carolina's threat of secession and evaluates the South's readiness for a war.

Mother

Decr. 11th 60

Richmond

Dear Mother

Your letter is received and contents noted. I will come up sometime after Christmass what time I cannot now say but as soon as circumstances will permit.

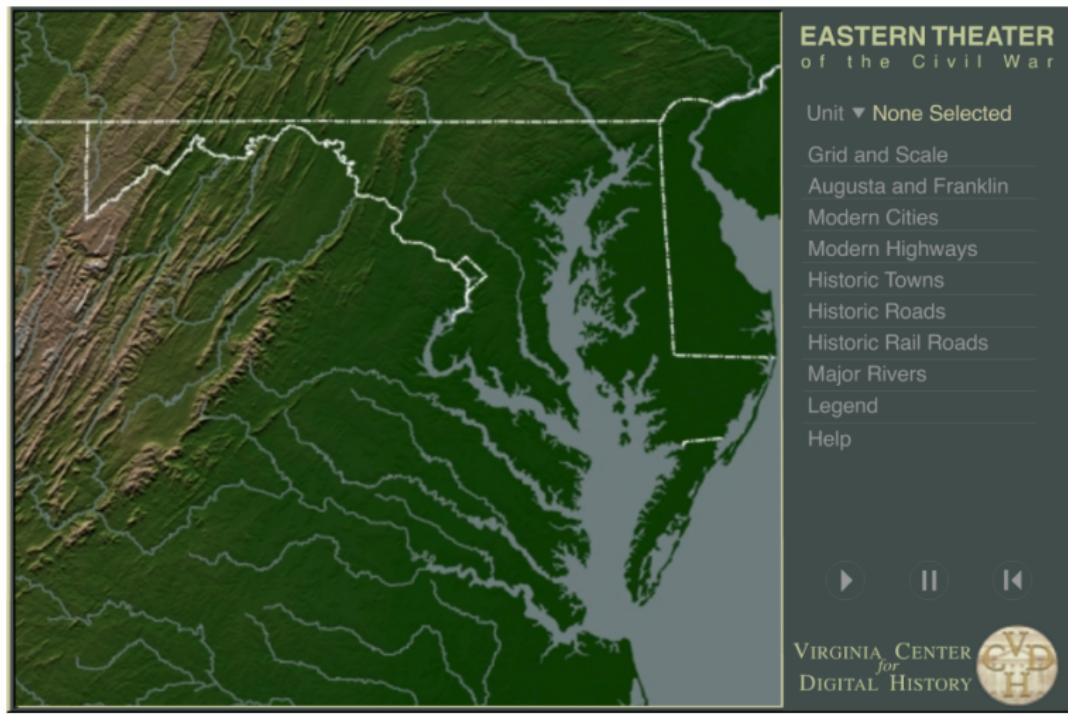

The country is now in a fearful state of agitation. So much so that thinking men believe that a war between the sections is imminent. Should things continue as they are I do not think that any one will venture into the tobacco business at least until near spring. We contemplate holding off until then as we expect that by that time things will have been settled or taken such a turn as to indicate whether the business will be safe or not. Ours (~~business~~) being a credit business and being carried on almost exclusively through agencies in the northern states would be the first and longest sufferer from civil war.

As you have seen by the papers your own glorious native state has at last determined to throw off the shackles of a government which it would be disgrace for any southern man to submit to. Glorious South Carolina how I wish I also could claim it for my native country. In this city the friends of Southern rights are not idle though we are not making any fuss or parade of our strength. We could muster with a days notice five hundred good men and true who are determined to maintain our rights. Even though we have to fight in the language of the infamous traitor Douglas "with halters around our necks." Blue cockades are not uncommon here. I have been wearing one for nearly two months and so help me God I intend if necessary to make the declaration implied by it good even with my hearts blood.

Arms, and the man I sing, who, forc'd by fate,
And haughty Juno's unrelenting hate,
Expell'd and exil'd, left the Trojan shore.
Long labors, both by sea and land, he bore,
And in the doubtful war, before he won
The Latian realm, and built the destin'd town;
His banish'd gods restor'd to rites divine,
And settled sure succession in his line,
From whence the race of Alban fathers come,
And the long glories of majestic Rome.

English (John Dryden)

Arms and the man I sing, who first made way, predestined exile, from the Trojan shore to Italy, the blest Lavinian strand.

Smitten of storms he was on land and sea
by violence of Heaven, to satisfy stern Juno's sleepless wrath; and much in war he suffered, seeking at the last to found the city, and bring o'er his fathers' gods to safe abode in Latium; whence arose
the Latin race, old Alba's reverend lords, and from her hills wide-walled, imperial Rome.

English (Theodore C. Williams, 1910)

While large migration tasks are best run via drush, you may choose here to execute tasks directly. Check any tasks you want to run, and click the Run button. Note that the settings below will be applied to each task you run.

Running tasks may be cleanly stopped by clicking Stop all running tasks.

Update previously-imported content

If unchecked, import operations will only process source data which has not already been imported. If checked, they will also replace previously-imported destination objects with the current source information.

Sample size:

50

Number of records to process. Leave blank to process all records in the content set.

Source IDs:

Enter a comma-separated list of IDs from the incoming content set, to process only those records.
